The National Religious Partnership for the Environment applauds the Biden Administration's focus on limiting emissions from cars and heavy-duty trucks through two proposed rules on cars and heavy-duty trucks.

Justice demands that we reduce the pollution that damages the health and wellbeing of families, particularly communities of color. These proposed rules, which help address the largest source of climate pollution, are a good step forward in addressing climate change. Our hope and prayer is that the Environmental Protection Agency will go even further to ensure that we have a clean, energy future while protecting those communities that have long borne the brunt of tailpipe pollution.
