

PROTECT GOD'S CREATION

The moral measure of a community is how it protects the land and water for future generations. In North Carolina, the measure of our community is now being taken as Congress considers whether to renew the Land and Water Conservation Fund, which has contributed over $200 million to protect our state's wilderness and parks, including the Blue Ridge Mountains, Cape Hatteras, and Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests.

If Congress doesn't act soon, then the fund will be eliminated. In the past, Senator Richard Burr called the Land and Water Conservation Fund "the most effective government program we have" and promised to protect it. It is time to take his moral measure and ours.
